Providing tracking solutions for people living with a cognitive brain impairment who wander

Bringing Wanderers Safely Home

WHAT IS IT?

WanderSearch provides a tracking system utilised by New Zealand Police Search & Rescue, and Land Search & Rescue volunteers to assist in searching for people living with cognitive impairment or developmental delay i.e. Dementia or Autism, who have the potential to wander. It is a tool to assist in locating the person and returning them to a safe environment quickly.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

The device is worn by the person in the form of a necklace, wrist or key-ring. Each device has a unique frequency which emits a pulse. The pulse is detected using a Radio Tracking Receiver, and a Directional Finding Aerial. The closer the tracking receiver is to the device, the stronger the pulse.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS?

Benefits include:

- faster method of locating missing person
- reduction in resources required for a search
- provides 'peace of mind' to families, care-givers and clients
- allows continued participation by some client in general daily activities

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST?

WanderSearch Auckland Charitable Trust does not charge for their services. The costs incurred by the Trust are $350 to issue the tracking device with an ongoing annual maintenance cost of $120. Families are asked to assist with these costs by making regular or yearly donations.
